

A Beach Fishing Cart that won't break the budget

I went shopping the other day to see whether I could afford the truck with the cherry picker for my beach fishing. After a lot of negotiating, I concluded that it was a little out of my price range and had to find an alternative. I searched the web and discovered an alternative that proved promising. A firm named Beach Wheels Australia had a cart which seemed to answer a lot of my questions. It proved big enough for gear for a couple of mates.

After a little negotiating with the firm, it arrived and within minutes of unpacking, the whole unit was ready to go. For a bit extra, they supplied a low pressure tyre gauge and a hand pump.

The tyres require between 2 and 4 psi's of inflation. I have now used it three times and have found it very suitable for my needs. For a bloke who has chiro' problems there is virtually no strain when using it. However, it does seem a little heavy when on an incline- eg: when coming off the beach along a formed exit.

Of course, I had to modify it for fishing purpose:

- A rod rack on the front-purchased from Bias.
- A rod rack of the rear of the cart for the two rod tubes.
- A new Plano tackle system which fits of a 20L pale.
- A new esky-Willow 25L which fits snugly across the cart.

One of the impressive features is the way it simply glides over the sand- it simply parts the sand. Also, it allows all fishing gear to be above the sand-less wear and tear on gear. Keeps the sand out of the sandwiches too!

Other uses:

- Family fun days at the beach-Dad not left to cart everything to the family's favourite spot.
- A cart for around the home-gardening, fun etc.
- Best of all- the imprimatur from Chris (the wife)-what more could a bloke ask?
